SWORDSWOMAN!: THE RANI OF JHANSI IN THE INDIAN MUTINY OF 1857

DEVIKA RANGACHARI

The thrilling true story of a legendarily tough Indian Queen

Queen Lakshmibai of Jhansi was an unconventional queen. She could read and write; she rode a horse and wielded a sword; she trained other women to ride and fight alongside her. When the East India Trading Company, who ruled India in the 19th century, demanded that she hand over control of Jhansi, she refused.

And when an uprising began to stir in 1857, and the British laid siege to her fortress, the warrior queen tied her infant son to her back, mounted her favourite horse, and escaped to raise an army.

This is the story of a woman who defied all conventions to become an icon of resistance in colonial-era India.

DR DEVIKA RANGACHARI is an award-winning writer whose book, Queen of Ice (Duckbill), was on the White Raven List, won the Neev Young Adult Book Award and has been optioned to be made into a movie/TV series.

THE FLAG NEVER TOUCHED THE GROUND: AMERICA'S BRAVE BLACK REGIMENT IN BATTLE

KEKLA MAGOON

The story of an all-black regiment fighting in the Civil War

In 1863, the US Civil War was raging. Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation had freed over 3.5 million African-American slaves, and now the Union Army began to recruit a second all-black regiment of soldiers to join the fight.

As the struggle against the Confederate South raged on, the newly-formed 54th Massachusetts battalion prepared to attack the seemingly impregnable fortress of Fort Wagner. The odds were heavily against them; the fort had never been taken. America was watching them – and when the bugle sounded they marched towards the guns, flag held high.

An author, speaker and writing teacher, KEKLA MAGOON has been longlisted for the National Book Award, received an NAACP Image Award, and two Coretta Scott King Awards. She initially studied history at Northwestern University in the US, and loves to uncover the stories of the brave and creative people who have come before us.

THE BLACK PIMPERNEL: NELSON MANDELA ON THE RUN

ZUKISWA WANNER

The heart-stopping true story of Mandela's early years on the run

In March 1961, after giving a brief speech at a conference, Nelson Mandela vanished.

For the next eighteen months he was an outlaw, living under assumed identities and in various disguises (sometimes as a chauffeur, sometimes a gardener) as the South African police and secret services, helped by MI5 and the CIA, sought him in vain. His mission? To undergo military training and set up armed resistance to apartheid.

A South African writer of children's and adult's books, ZUKISWA WANNER was included on the 2014 Africa39 list of 39 writers likely to shape the narrative of literature. In 2020, she was one of the recipients of the Goethe medal, making her the first African woman to win this award. Her latest children's book is Africa: A True Book, a journey through the history, geography and contemporary culture of the continent. She has written for the Observer (UK), New York Times, Mail and Guardian (SA), The Nation (Kenya) and New African.

FOG OF WAR: MARTHA GELLHORN AT THE D-DAY LANDINGS

MICHELLE JABÈS CORPORA

One woman's perilous journey to report from the heart of the war

Martha Gellhorn was one of the world's greatest war correspondents. She wrote for Collier's magazine, which could only send one journalist to cover the invasion of France in June 1944. When Ernest Hemingway – Gellhorn's estranged husband and the most famous writer in the world – offered his services, they took away Gellhorn's pass and gave it to him.

Undeterred, the night before the invasion she blagged her way on to a hospital ship and locked herself in the lavatory until it was too late to send her back. She worked as a nurse on board, treating both Allied and German casualties before going ashore with the soldiers, filing her brilliant reports from the scene of the battle.

MICHELLE JABÈS CORPORA is American and based in the US. She has written five adventures for the world-famous Nancy Drew Diaries and Hardy Boys series. She has a Masters of Arts in Children's Literature from Hollins University. She has always been excited by history, and her middle-grade historical novel, A Thimbleful of Hope, is forthcoming from Penguin.
