An extract from

THE SPELL TAILORS

James Nicol

As he went into the first bedroom, footsteps echoing on the bare floorboards, he was surprised to find Connie there already, framed in the dusty window, staring out over the back of Beacham Terrace. It was a nice view across the little yards and gardens that backed onto the houses and shops. A pile of sheets and a feature pillow had been set at the foot of the bed.

‘Not as nice as your bedroom at home,’ Hen said.

He’d glimpsed Connie’s bedroom through a partly open door once on a visit to their house in Richwood. It had been stuffed with toys and books. Compared to that, Hen thought this must seem quite a come-down really. Poor Connie.

‘Do you need anything? Extra blankets? Another pillow?’

Connie didn’t say anything, she just kept staring out of the window.

‘Connie?’

Still no reply.

‘Oh yes, thank you dear cousin, that would be so kind of you,’ Hen replied to himself, trying to sound like Connie but extra-snooty.

When she still didn’t say anything, he turned around and headed for the door. What was the point?

‘He lost it all.’ Connie spoke so quietly that at first Hen wasn’t sure she had spoken at all. He paused by the door.

‘What? Who?’ Hen asked, turning back to her.

‘My dad,’ Connie explained, keeping her voice low. ‘The shops, the house in Richwood, we can’t afford to live there now. It’s all gone.’

Hen glanced back at the door, worried that Connie was sharing secrets she shouldn’t be, and a grown-up might overhear. But he was curious to know more. ‘What do you mean? This isn’t permanent, is it?’ Hen felt his stomach squeeze nervously. ‘Didn’t they say it was just to ... um ... consolidate the business?’

‘That’s just one of those grown-up words that doesn’t mean anything at all,’ Connie said, bitterly. ‘Things haven’t been great for a while, Hen. Dad closed the Thornton Arcade shop at the end of last year and Carlyle Row closed last week after the spell-brats finished off most of the stock waiting to be collected. There were already lots of debts, that’s why he had to sell the house.’

‘He sold the house?’ Hen gaped. He couldn’t believe what he was hearing. Bertie had said they’d be living and working here together ... but he hadn’t said it would be for ever!

She finally turned to face him. ‘So I know this is just a massive inconvenience to you, Hen, but trust me, I’m not exactly mad about the idea of living here either, thanks. So I’d appreciate it if you would just leave me alone.’ And with that, she turned back to the window and silence.

DESCRIPTION

Hen dreams of becoming a spell tailor, stitching magic into clothing like his beloved Nana. But thanks to new factories, spell tailors are struggling. His Uncle Bertie’s fancy shop has shut down, and when he, Aunt Lucia and stuck-up cousin Connie move in, it’s a disaster for all the family ... Then Hen stumbles upon a new kind of stitch – one which causes Nana and Bertie to ban him from sewing. What is the power of the stitch that can sew memories into clothes – and could it be the very thing to save them all?

Alina & Lev are two siblings living in Pripyat, one of the Soviet Union's proud nuclear cities. Both are asleep in their beds.

Their cousin, Yuri, is a custodian at the Chernobyl Nuclear Power Plant, where he's fiercely attacking a spill in the hallway with a mop.

Alina's best friend, Sofiya, sleeps just a few doors down. Her father is an engineer at the plant, a fact that has always filled her with pride.

In five minutes, Reactor No. 4 will explode in a ball of fire. It will expel radiation across their town for nine days before it's finally contained. For the people of Pripyat, it will be far too late.

Two young siblings flee the Chernobyl disaster with their parents, but the Communist party is on their heels. Meanwhile, the friends and family they were forced to leave behind must contend with a disinformation campaign that's determined to pretend nothing is wrong-even as deadly radiation spills into the air.

About the author: Andy Marino was born and raised in upstate New York. He spent his childhood orchestrating LEGO pirate battles, drawing detailed maps of imaginary video games, and cheating death in Choose Your Own Adventure books.

Profoundly influenced by the work of J.R.R. Tolkien, Andy started writing his first novel at the age of eleven. Tragically, THE RUNES OF ILLIARM was never completed. For books that were, visit Andy online at andy-marino.com.

Sally enjoys writing children's books because adult books tend to be incredibly long and don't tell you facts about where bogeys come from or teach you how to do useful things, such as making a Viking helmet out of stuff you have on your desk.

Sally has written books for Scholastic UK, Penguin Random House, Little Tiger, Hachette, Lonely Planet and Arcturus.
