IF I MET A TIGER

A.F. HARROLD, ILLUSTRATED BY MAGDA BROL

THE BOOK

Ever wondered what you'd actually say to a tiger—or what that beetle on your kitchen floor is really thinking?

Step into the wild and the wonderful with A.F. Harrold's latest poetry collection. From the majesty of the Great Outdoors to the quiet mysteries of your own back garden, these verses skip from laugh-out-loud funny to quietly profound.

Pairing Harrold's trademark wit with Magda Brol's vibrant illustrations, If I Met a Tiger is the perfect companion for nature lovers, poetry fans, and anyone who suspects animals know much more than they're letting on.

KEY SALE POINTS

- Vibrant and charming Author-Illustrator Duo
- Accessible poetry
- Encourages empathy and curiosity

THE AUTHOR

A.F. Harrold (1975 - present) is an English poet and children's author. Some of the things he makes (books, poems, faces) are funny, some are strange, some are sad, and many of them involve the privilege of working with amazing illustrators. He often visits schools, reading poems and running workshops and juggling ideas. He is the owner of many books, a handful of hats, a few good ideas and one beard. He lives in Reading with a stand-up comedian and two cats.

The Dog and the Pigeons and the Poet

The dog bounced through the pigeons, spraying them
like water from a garden sprinkler,

but with more feathers and flapping.

They flew off, cooing and fussing –
some to the trees,
some to the fence,
some to the roofs,
some way off, out of sight,

so, not much like water from a garden sprinkler at all,
now I come to think of it.

Which only goes to show it – you should never trust a poet.

Cook's Cook

The Cook Who Cooked for Captain Cook

Author and Illustrator Gavin Bishop

The 1768 journey of James Cook's H.M.S. Endeavour through the eyes of the ship's cook, telling multiple stories through recipes and events on board and on shore

ABOUT THE BOOK

Cook's Cook follows the 1768 journey of James Cook's H.M.S. Endeavour with his ship's cook, the one-handed Jon Thompson, as story teller. Through real recipes from the ship's galley, events on board, and the places the ship traveled on its way to the Pacific, the book tells multiple stories.

There are stories of social class, hierarchy, and race; stories of explorers and the people of the land; and the story of one of the world's most famous explorers told through a fresh new lens.

This beautiful book is full of information drawn from extensive research alongside evocative illustrations.

SALES POINTS

- Exploration, adventure and history
- Recipes from the actual voyage shape the story
- Full of information, appealing to a wide age range

AUGUST 26TH, 1768 PLYMOUTH, ENGLAND

The Endeavour sailed out of Plymouth this afternoon.

My galley's on the mess deck. The men sling their hammocks here at night, but they have to be gone by eight in the morning so I can make breakfast.

After breakfast, one man from each table helps me out. I give him his table's ration of flour, suet and raisins to mix the puddings. Then he labels the pudding bags and drops them in the boiler alongside the meat—all in together. Come dinnertime, he serves up for his messmates. In the great cabin above, the lieutenants have their own cook who prepares their evening meals.

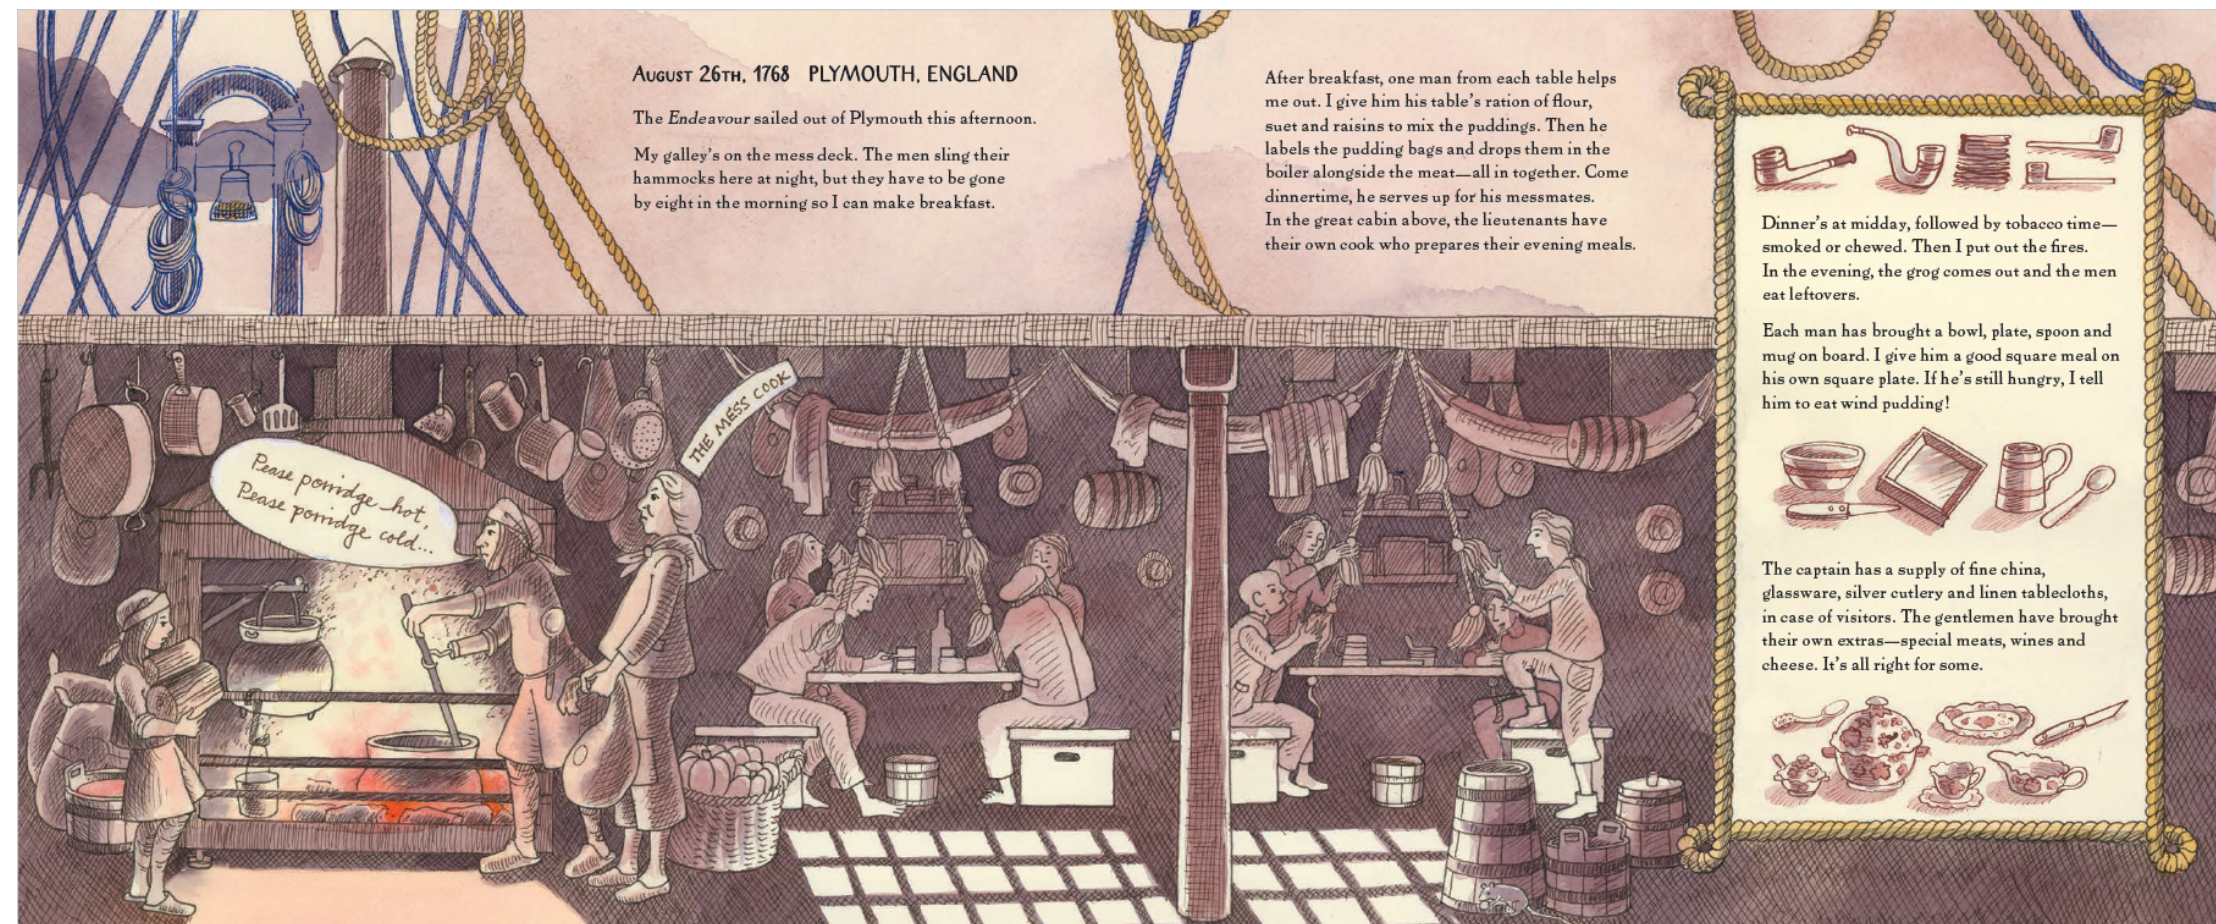

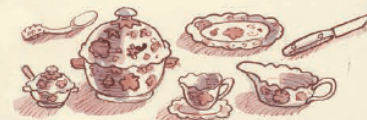

Dinner's at midday, followed by tobacco time—smoked or chewed. Then I put out the fires. In the evening, the grog comes out and the men eat leftovers.

Each man has brought a bowl, plate, spoon and mug on board. I give him a good square meal on his own square plate. If he's still hungry, I tell him to eat wind pudding!

The captain has a supply of fine china, glassware, silver cutlery and linen tablecloths, in case of visitors. The gentlemen have brought their own extras—special meats, wines and cheese. It's all right for some.

Everyone in the neighbourhood is Mikey's friend... except Mr Grumble.

He pops footballs.
He shouts at loud music.
He hates picnics.

But Mikey is sure that deep down, he's a big gooey marshmallow. Armed with a camera and a crazy idea, Mikey sets out to prove it.

What he discovers might just change the whole neighbourhood.

Ashwin Chacko is a positively playful award-winning author-illustrator, and motivational speaker. His work combines humour, heart, and expressive characters. Known for bold, playful artwork and character-driven storytelling, his stories celebrate kindness, curiosity, and the small moments that bring joy, encouraging communities to come together.

KEY SELLING POINTS:

- A funny and heartfelt picture book about kindness and community
- Relatable "grumpy neighbour" character children will instantly recognise
- Modern storytelling device with a child narrator filming neighbourhood life
- Gentle exploration of empathy, privacy and understanding others
- Perfect for classroom discussion about kindness, community and empathy

Rescue in Regent's Park

By Adam Bethlehem
Illustrated by Zuzanna Celej

TRIPLE
POINT PRESS

A delightful rhyming tale about two creatures who meet on a snowy winter's day ...

The poem is suitable for younger children but is also an allegory about life in modern London exploring the themes of friendship and love across a divide.

Beautifully illustrated in a traditional style by award-winning artist Zuzanna Celej.

Two further stories ready to make up a series.

Charles Edward Fox is a gentle soul who would rather eat nuts and berries than join his brothers who love to hunt.

It's a lonely life for a vegetarian fox until he makes his way to London where Frederica Porter-Mouse offers refuge and friendship in her home in Regent's Park.

WHO'S BEHIND THE BOOK?

Adam Bethlehem

Adam was born in London and grew up in South Africa. He trained as a doctor before returning to the UK to study physics. He has also worked as a bookseller, a confectioner and a medico-legal advisor.

The Lucky House Detective Agency

Scarlett Li

Mystery with a side order of friendship!

The first in this cosy crime middle-grade series set in a Chinese takeaway, created in partnership with Storymix and author Lui Sit. With black-and-white internal artwork.

Felix and his best friend Isaac love mysteries – chasing clues, identifying suspects, catching criminals – they can't wait to open their own detective agency. So when Felix's parents' Lucky House takeaway is cursed with a spate of bad luck, Felix is determined to find the culprit.

The boys' investigations lead them to a clue: an ancient coin with a square hole at its centre. Could this lead them to secret treasure? (Un)fortunately, 'Nosy' Nina Ding, Felix's sworn enemy, may have the answers. While volunteering at the local museum, Nina spotted an old Chinese jewellery box with an indentation in the same shape as the mysterious coin. Does Leighton-on-Sea have more links to Hong Kong than Felix could ever have imagined?

About the Author

Scarlett Li is a pseudonym for author Lui Sit, who was born in Hong Kong, raised in Australia and lives in London. She writes children's middle grade books, adult short fiction, and non-fiction. Her other children's books include Land of the Last Wildcat (Macmillan, 2025). She is happiest by the sea, within a forest or in a library – preferably with chocolate and/or coffee within reaching distance. You can find her at www.lui-land.co.uk or on Instagram at @lui.land

Wag!

Beginnings

Gita Wolf – publisher at Tara Books – was locked down on her farm in South India during the pandemic when she received an unexpected gift: a small puppy with large brown eyes. It was love at first sight. Those who knew Gita were astonished, since she had always been afraid of dogs. But this promised to be the start of a new relationship, one that was life changing. As the bond between Gita and her dog deepened over time, she became increasingly curious about what it was that they shared.

Digging deeper

Did dogs and humans feel the same way? Gita could only guess what her dog was feeling from the way he was behaving. Her curiosity about what was behind it all led to an extended period of reading and research into the emotional life of dogs – how dogs and humans are alike, and in what ways we are different. What she discovered was fascinating, and she felt there was a book in there.

The book

Gita didn't want a dry and didactic account of the inner lives of dogs. There was so much more to life with a dog – love and companionship, but also energy, play and chaos. To come up with something light and jolly, she thought of Christiane Pieper, an old illustrator friend. Christiane had grown up on a farm in Germany, surrounded by dogs. She loved drawing animals, and had a great sense of humour. Together, they came up with a story about a girl called Nina and her dog Max, made up of short comic strips. Each of these hilarious scenes was built around moods and feelings they thought important. Going into this in more detail would take away from the lightness of the book, so they brought it in as an afterword for the curious reader – who could then return to the scenes in the book with a more nuanced understanding of what was happening.

Key features

- The emotional life of dogs
- Short humorous comic strip stories
- Founded afterword on the inner life of dogs
- For dog lovers everywhere
- Crossover picture book for all ages
- Combines fiction and non-fiction
- Invites the reader to repeated re-readings
- Connecting human beings and animals without anthropomorphizing – we are alike, but also different
- Conversation on human-animal relationships
- Clues on interpreting dog behaviour
- Understanding a dog's needs and emotions leads to better care and welfare

Pillaging the Dead by Degol Hailu

CASSAVA
REPUBLIC

On the streets of this city, banned books travel faster than fear.

Tarik sells banned books, pirated music and political cartoons on the streets of an unnamed African capital. When a police raid turns violent, he is drawn into a world of dissidents and surveillance. Darkly comic and deeply unsettling, Pillaging the Dead is a sharp satire about censorship, corruption and resistance under authoritarian rule.

Key sales points:

- A darkly comic debut blending political satire and literary fiction: Sharp, propulsive and deeply humane, Pillaging the Dead explores censorship, corruption and survival under authoritarian rule.
- An unforgettable young protagonist: Street bookseller and cartoonist Tarik navigates underground activism, police violence and political paranoia in a vividly realised African capital.
- A vivid portrait of everyday life under authoritarian rule: From underground printers to banned books and secret police raids, the novel captures the tensions, absurdities and dangers of life under state surveillance.
- For fans of Alain Mabanckou and Ngũgĩ wa Thiong'o: Perfect for readers of politically engaged literary fiction and dark social satire.

Degol Hailu was born in Ethiopia and is based in London. He earned a PhD in economics from SOAS, University of London, before working as a research fellow and later for the United Nations across Africa, Europe, the Caribbean and the United States. Pillaging the Dead is his debut novel.

STOLEN THINGS

A.M. HOWELL

THE BOOK

Isolated and unheard, this is a claustrophobic, dark, and moving portrait of a woman who must decide how far she's willing to go to protect her child and her home. For fans of Stacey Halls, Lizzie Pook, and Laura Purcell.

He thinks me mad; he thinks me quite mad. Perhaps I am.

December 1919. War widow Della Pemberton consoles herself through a life of petty theft and her beloved tonic for female disorders. But, when a stranger arrives at her home claiming it belongs to him, her world is upended when she discovers the man's left behind a small baby.

The arrival of the child thrusts Della into a frightening new reality after a series of unexplained events; the delivery of baby gifts, an infant's bone found in the attic, and peculiar noises within the walls of the house at night.

When she receives a note predicting she'll commit murder, Della realises someone is out to do her harm. But with her own health worsening and a small baby to care for, she discovers that fighting for the truth and her life will come at the highest of prices.

THE AUTHOR

A.M. Howell is an award-winning author of middle grade historical mysteries. She was the recipient of The East Anglian Book of the Year in 2020, the first time a children's book has won this award, and has received five-star reviews in The Times and Daily Telegraph.

Ann-Marie lives in Suffolk with her husband and two almost grown-up children and when she's not writing she loves nothing more than curling up with a good book or taking a long walk in the countryside. Stolen Things is her debut adult fiction book.

KEY SALES POINTS:

- Mystery layered with horror elements: Strange gifts, eerie noises, and disturbing clues keep readers hooked.
- Post-WWI female experience: Explores grief, trauma, and the limited agency of women in 1919 Britain.
- Slow-burn psychological tension that escalates into shocking revelations.
- Atmospheric gothic setting: A decaying house filled with whispers, secrets, and sinister discoveries creates an intense sense of isolation.

JUST GOOD HOUSEMATES

MELANIE TAYLOR

THE BOOK

Modern romance with a wild Yorkshire heart. Melanie Taylor delivers the perfect romcom escape for fans of Sophie Kinsella and Beth O'Leary.

At their wedding twenty years ago, Luke Cooper promised Lizzie a lifetime of laughter, loyalty, and love. He meant every word. She believed him.

Now, they can barely stand to be in the same room.

Desperate and out of options, they sign up for a painfully low budget reality show, Just Good Housemates. The rules are simple: live together for six weeks, be filmed in their own home... and don't fall back in love.

But between awkward on-camera tasks, off-camera tension, unexpected dates, and a community obsessed with their every move, things quickly spiral. Jealousy flares, secrets surface, and one mistake changes everything.

As the show, and their lives, spin out of control, Luke and Lizzie must decide what's real, what's worth saving, and whether love can survive when the whole world is watching.

THE AUTHOR

Melanie Taylor is a Yorkshire lass, writing about all the things she loves: outdoor adventures, animals, nature and wild swimming.

A self-proclaimed romance nerd, all her books feature a good bit of swoon, which she hopes will make readers laugh, cry and blush.

DREAMS

TEJU BEHAN

A poignant and beautifully illustrated recall of a life in art, Dreams tells the story of Teju Behan in her own words. From a community of nomadic singers from western India, Teju was born into poverty, and like many from her village, her family left for the city in search of work. Even as she worked at odd jobs, and at home, Teju learned to draw and this changed things for her.

Dreams takes off from Teju's earlier work, Drawing from the City. It builds on the earlier narrative, but takes it forward. Teju reflects not only on her childhood, her coming to the city, marriage and family but also about her art, and her identity as an artist.

She wonders if her daughter Sangita who is also an artist, would stay with her vocation. Above all, her memoir is about the creative imagination, and how that has made for moments of happy and calm respite from a harsh life, and has enabled her dream of other worlds.

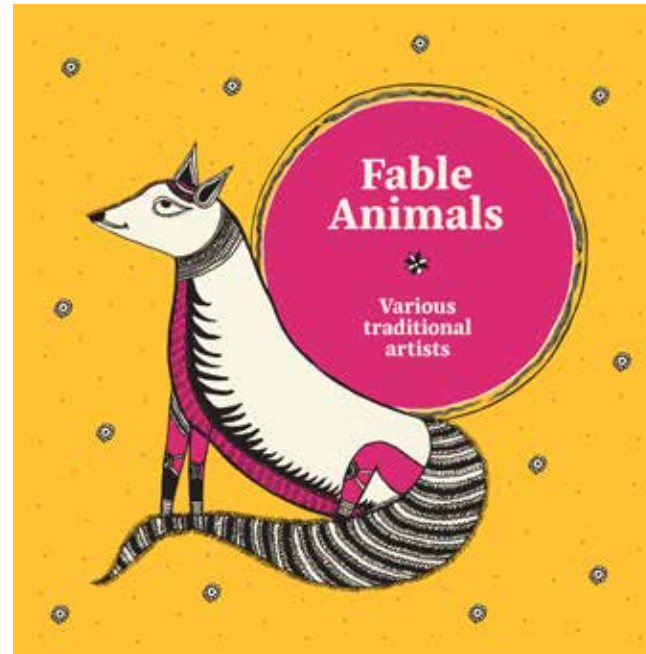

TEJU BEHAN is from Gujarat from western India. A self-taught artist, she has been drawing for over 4 decades. Her style is her own – and is distinctive in the dense detailing that goes into her image-making.

BOOK DETAILS

Women's Art / Memoir
HC / 48 pp / 200 x 300 mm
Colour / Offset-printed
£20.00 / 9789390037131

HIGHLIGHTS

- A one-of-a-kind memoir that presents the portrait of the artist as a working-class woman, battling life, poverty and finding a measure of agency through art
- Illustrated narrative, in which each picture stands out as a painting in its own right, even as it captures moments from Teju's life
- Features women in a range of contexts and situations – calling attention to their sense of place, their dynamism and the ways in which they keep their minds and imagination alive
- Suggests the trials as well as happiness that attend the making of a female art tradition
- Comes with an afterword by the publisher that situates the memoir in context, tracing its emergence from the artist's previous book, while linking her endeavour to her daughter's emergent work

Fable Animals

Revisiting a classic

Our first visual anthology of traditional Indian art was published in 2003. Called Beasts of India, it featured renderings of animals in a number of folk and tribal art traditions from across the country. The book went on to become something of a classic, staying in print over decades. It captures two important facets of Indian traditional art: the first is the ubiquitous presence of animals – both tame and wild – in all the art styles. The second is the range of imaginative possibilities in the rendering of a beast. Each animal is quirky, but recognizable. Recently, Beasts of India was up for a reprint again... and this time we wondered if we could conceive of a different way of approaching the subject.

Fabular animals

Looking over our collection of traditional animal paintings, we realized that most of them were generic to the style, yet some of them were curiously quirky and individual. They were characters. This got us thinking about texts which featured animals as characters – and of course, fables are the best and oldest examples. So we took up the Panchatantra – an ancient Indian collection of fables that predates Aesop – in which animal characters are used to teach complex lessons to human beings. An animal in these wisdom tales is both itself, as well as a shorthand for a particular human archetype. This gave us a rich and interesting concept for a collection of animal portraits. So we decided on a book which would feature some of the most iconic animals that appear in the Panchatantra, with a short description of the character assigned to it.

Concept, design and production

Each animal in the book is rendered in the style of a particular art tradition in India – some of them are from our collection, and others have been painted especially for the book. The animal's posture and expression dominates each page, anchored by subtle design elements. Brief captions call attention to the animal's qualities, as they were conceived in an ancient text. The book also includes a short note on the Panchatantra, urging the reader to discover these interesting tales for themselves. Silkscreened and bound by hand on handmade paper, this limited edition handmade book is designed to be a collectors' item, in form and content.

Key features

- An unusual bestiary, with each animal rendered in a traditional Indian art style
- Animal portraits based on a rich and interesting ancient concept of character
- Introduction to Indian traditional art, as well as an ancient Indian collection of fables
- A brief note on the Panchatantra, the best known collection of Indian wisdom tales
- Handmade, limited edition collectors' book at an affordable price

Would You Still Love Me If I Was a Worm?

A curious child with a wild imagination asks their mum a series of outlandish questions in this delightfully silly, laugh-out-loud picture book all about unconditional love.

What if you turned into a worm? A ghost? Mouldy cheese? Or a fungus with a stench that's humongous! Would your family still love you?

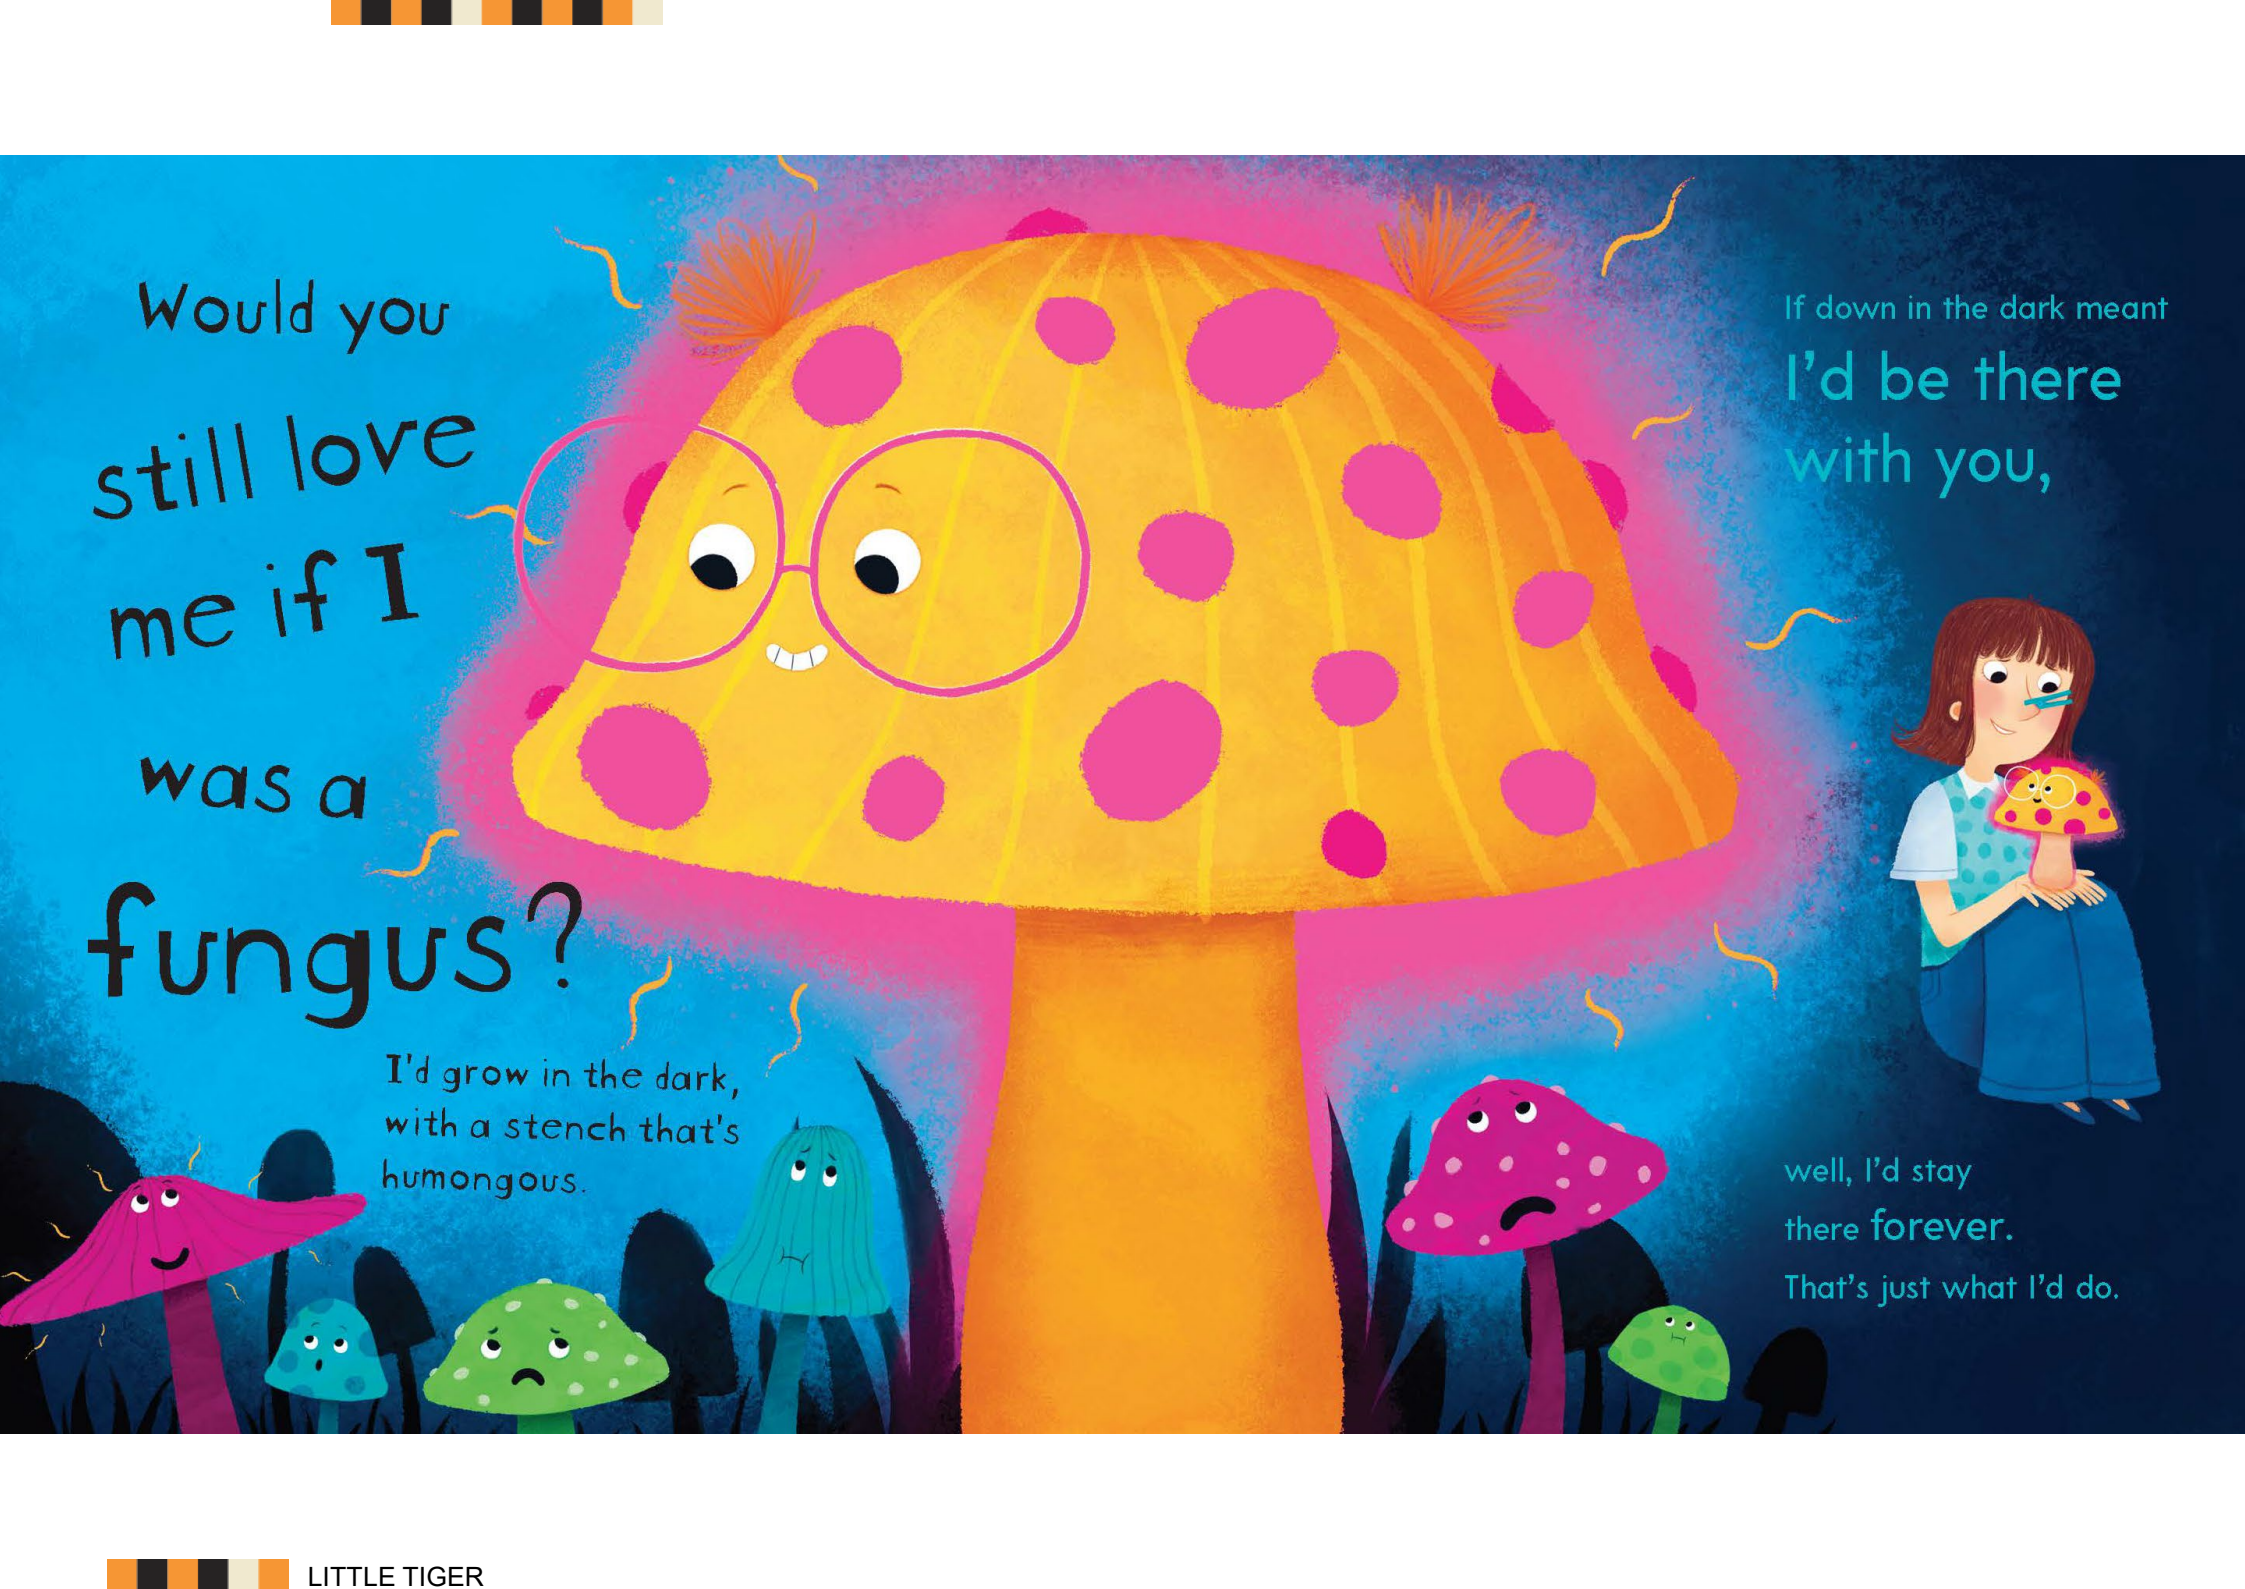

Writing in bouncy rhyme, debut author Meghan Sullivan fills every page with squelchy, spooky, sticky fun. Whilst illustrator Ludi Copper makes even the grossest, weirdest moments look irresistibly cute with art that uses an eye-catching neon pink ink.

Sales Points:

- Based on the global viral meme, this book will appeal to children and adults alike. An escalating, cumulative call-and-response rhyme, packed with hilarious twists and turns.
- The perfect way to say 'I love you' at any time.

Meghan Sullivan (Author) lives in South East London with her very fluffy dog and her not-so-fluffy husband. When not dreaming about picture books, you can find her running (very, very slowly) and eating cheese and waffles.

Ludi Cooper (Illustrator) is an illustrator from Rome, Italy, who creates vibrant and colourful artwork, often featuring imaginative worlds and expressive animals. She works from her home studio with her beloved cat by her side.

Would you

humongous.

If down in the dark meant
I'd be there with you,

well, I'd stay
there forever.
That's just what I'd do.

Steam trains

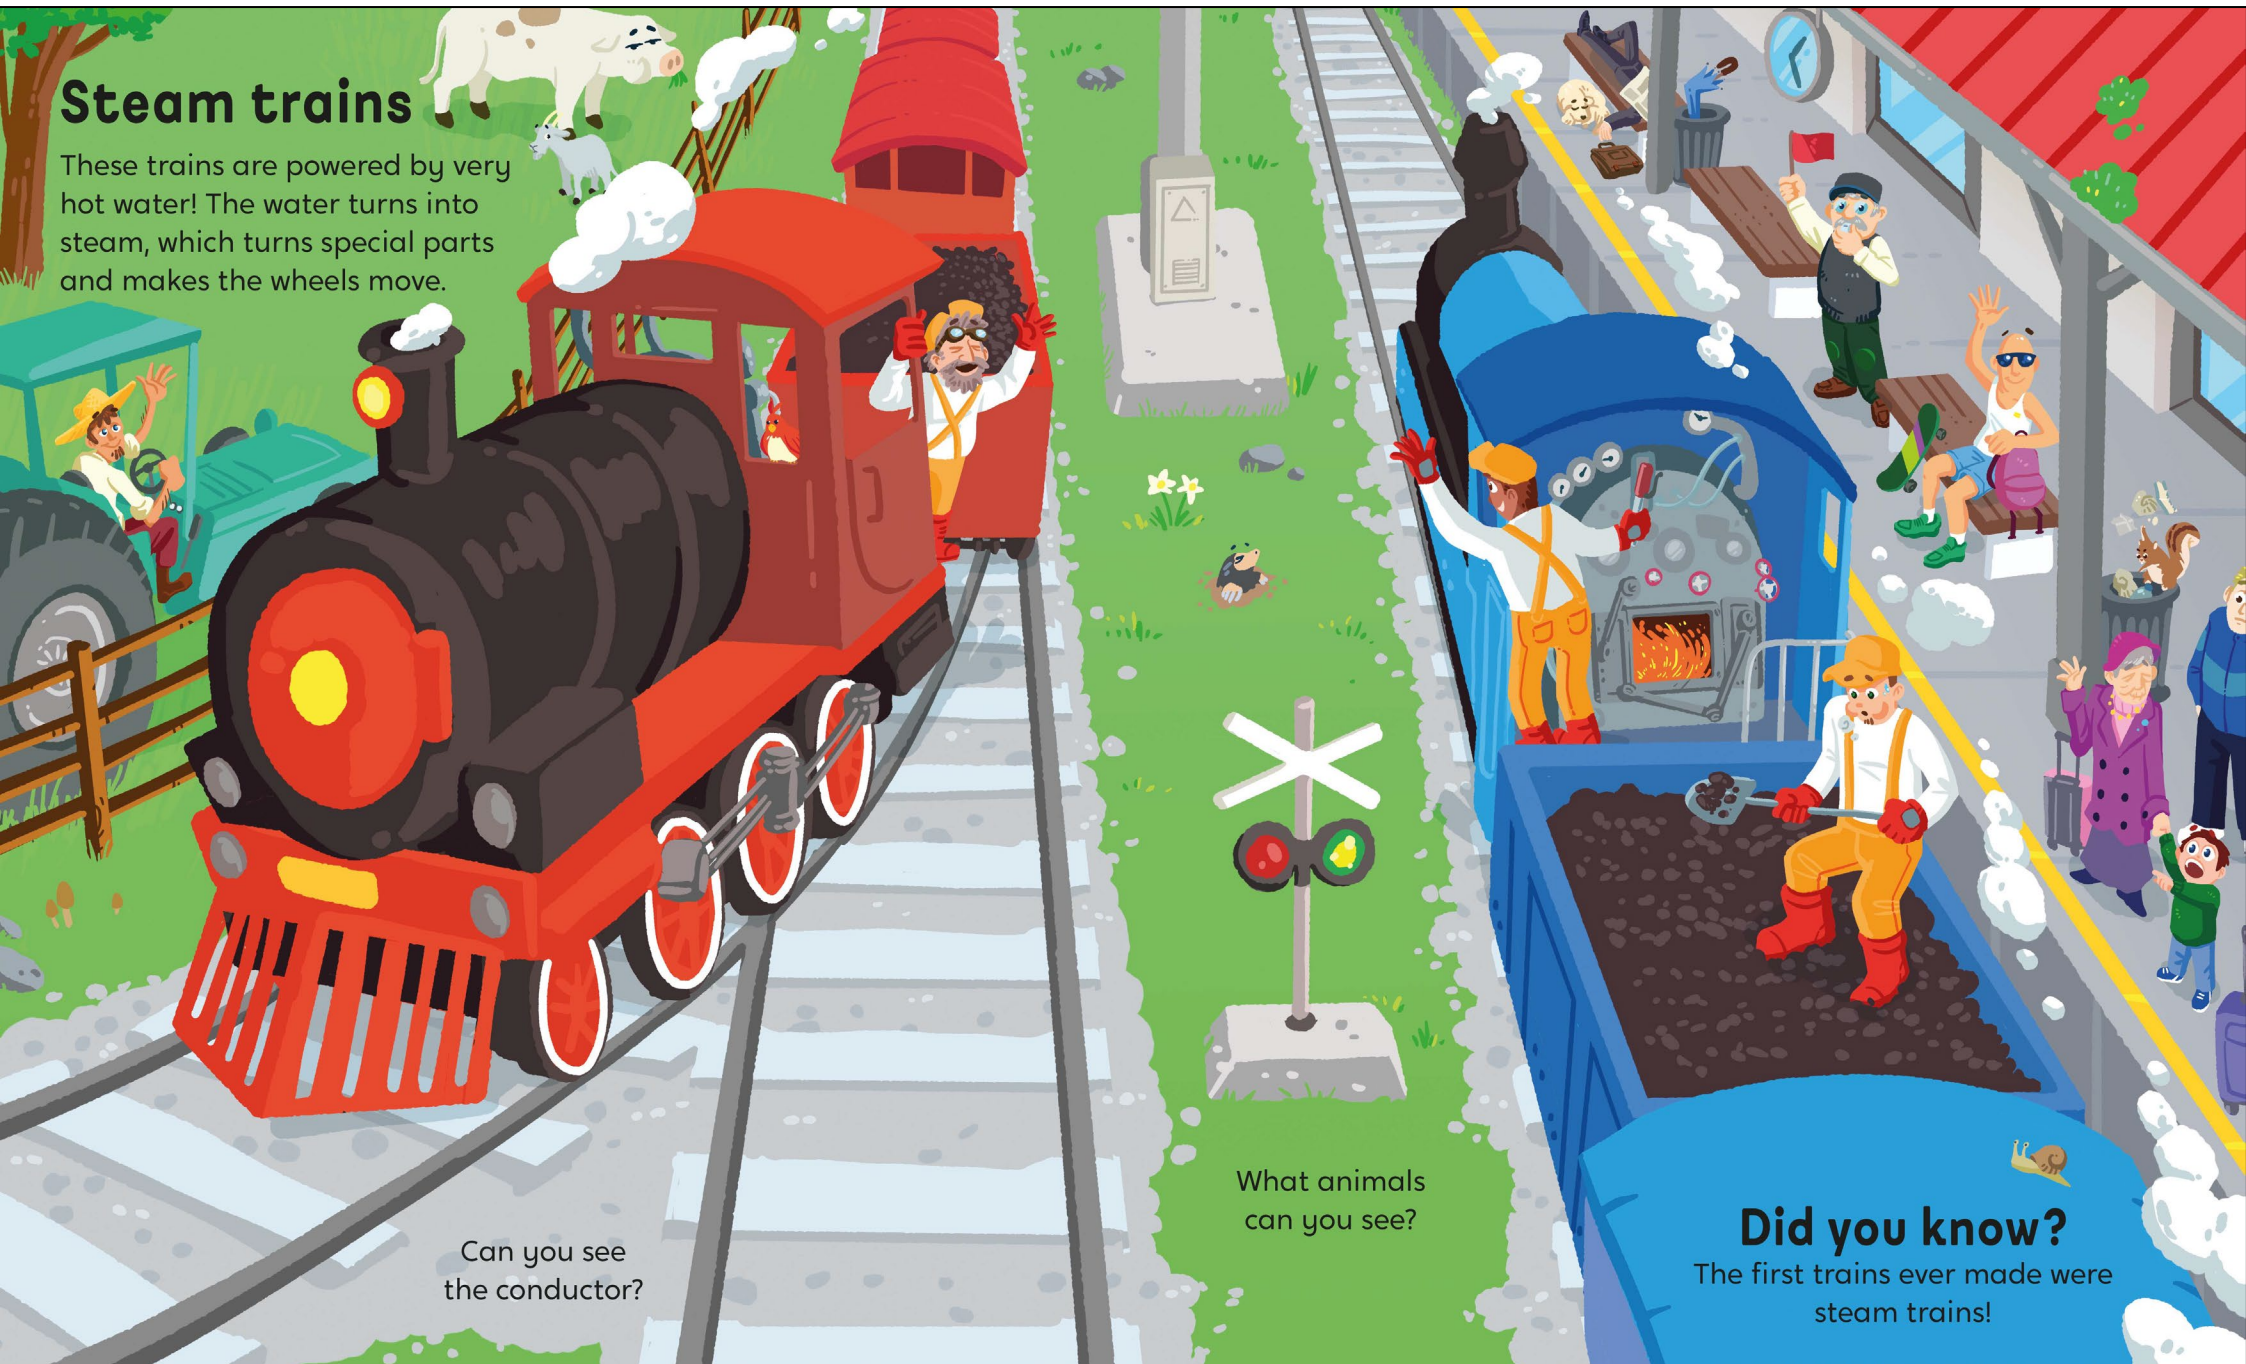

These trains are powered by very hot water! The water turns into steam, which turns special parts and makes the wheels move.

Can you see the conductor?

What animals
can you see?

Did you know?

The first trains ever made were steam trains!

HELLO CHAMELEON

Written by Rex Luther

Cornwall-based writer Rex Luther, a Journalism & Creative Writing graduate of Falmouth University, was first inspired by one unforgettable family storyteller. Today, Luther writes children's non-fiction that brings truth to life with the same warmth and wonder.

Hello Chameleon invites children into the vibrant world of reptiles.

Told from the perspective of a chameleon preparing for a very important event, the story follows its journey through forests, deserts, and gardens as it experiments with patterns, colours, and textures to find the perfect "outfit." Along the way, the chameleon meets geckos, iguanas, snakes, and other reptiles, introducing readers to camouflage, adaptation, and survival strategies in different habitats.

Illustrated in vivid colours with a playful narrative, Hello Chameleon makes biology accessible and fun and gives young readers an entertaining, educational glimpse into the life of reptiles.

Selling points:

- Explaining how chameleons camouflage and why adaptation matters
- Teaching fascinating reptile facts and diverse habitats
- Encouraging curiosity, observation, and appreciation of wildlife with accessible science
- Entertaining narrative non-fiction, combining information with story
- Vibrant illustrations; perfect at home or at school

Hello Coral invites children into the busy, colourful world of coral reefs.

Told from the perspective of a piece of coral running a hotel for fish, the story follows its daily adventures accommodating a variety of aquatic guests. From tiny damselfish to shy parrotfish, the coral provides shelter, protection, and cozy spaces while introducing readers to the fascinating lives and needs of reef creatures.

With vibrant visuals and a warm, accessible voice, Hello Coral blends accurate science with storytelling, giving young readers an engaging glimpse into life on a coral reef – and inspiring them to care about the ocean.

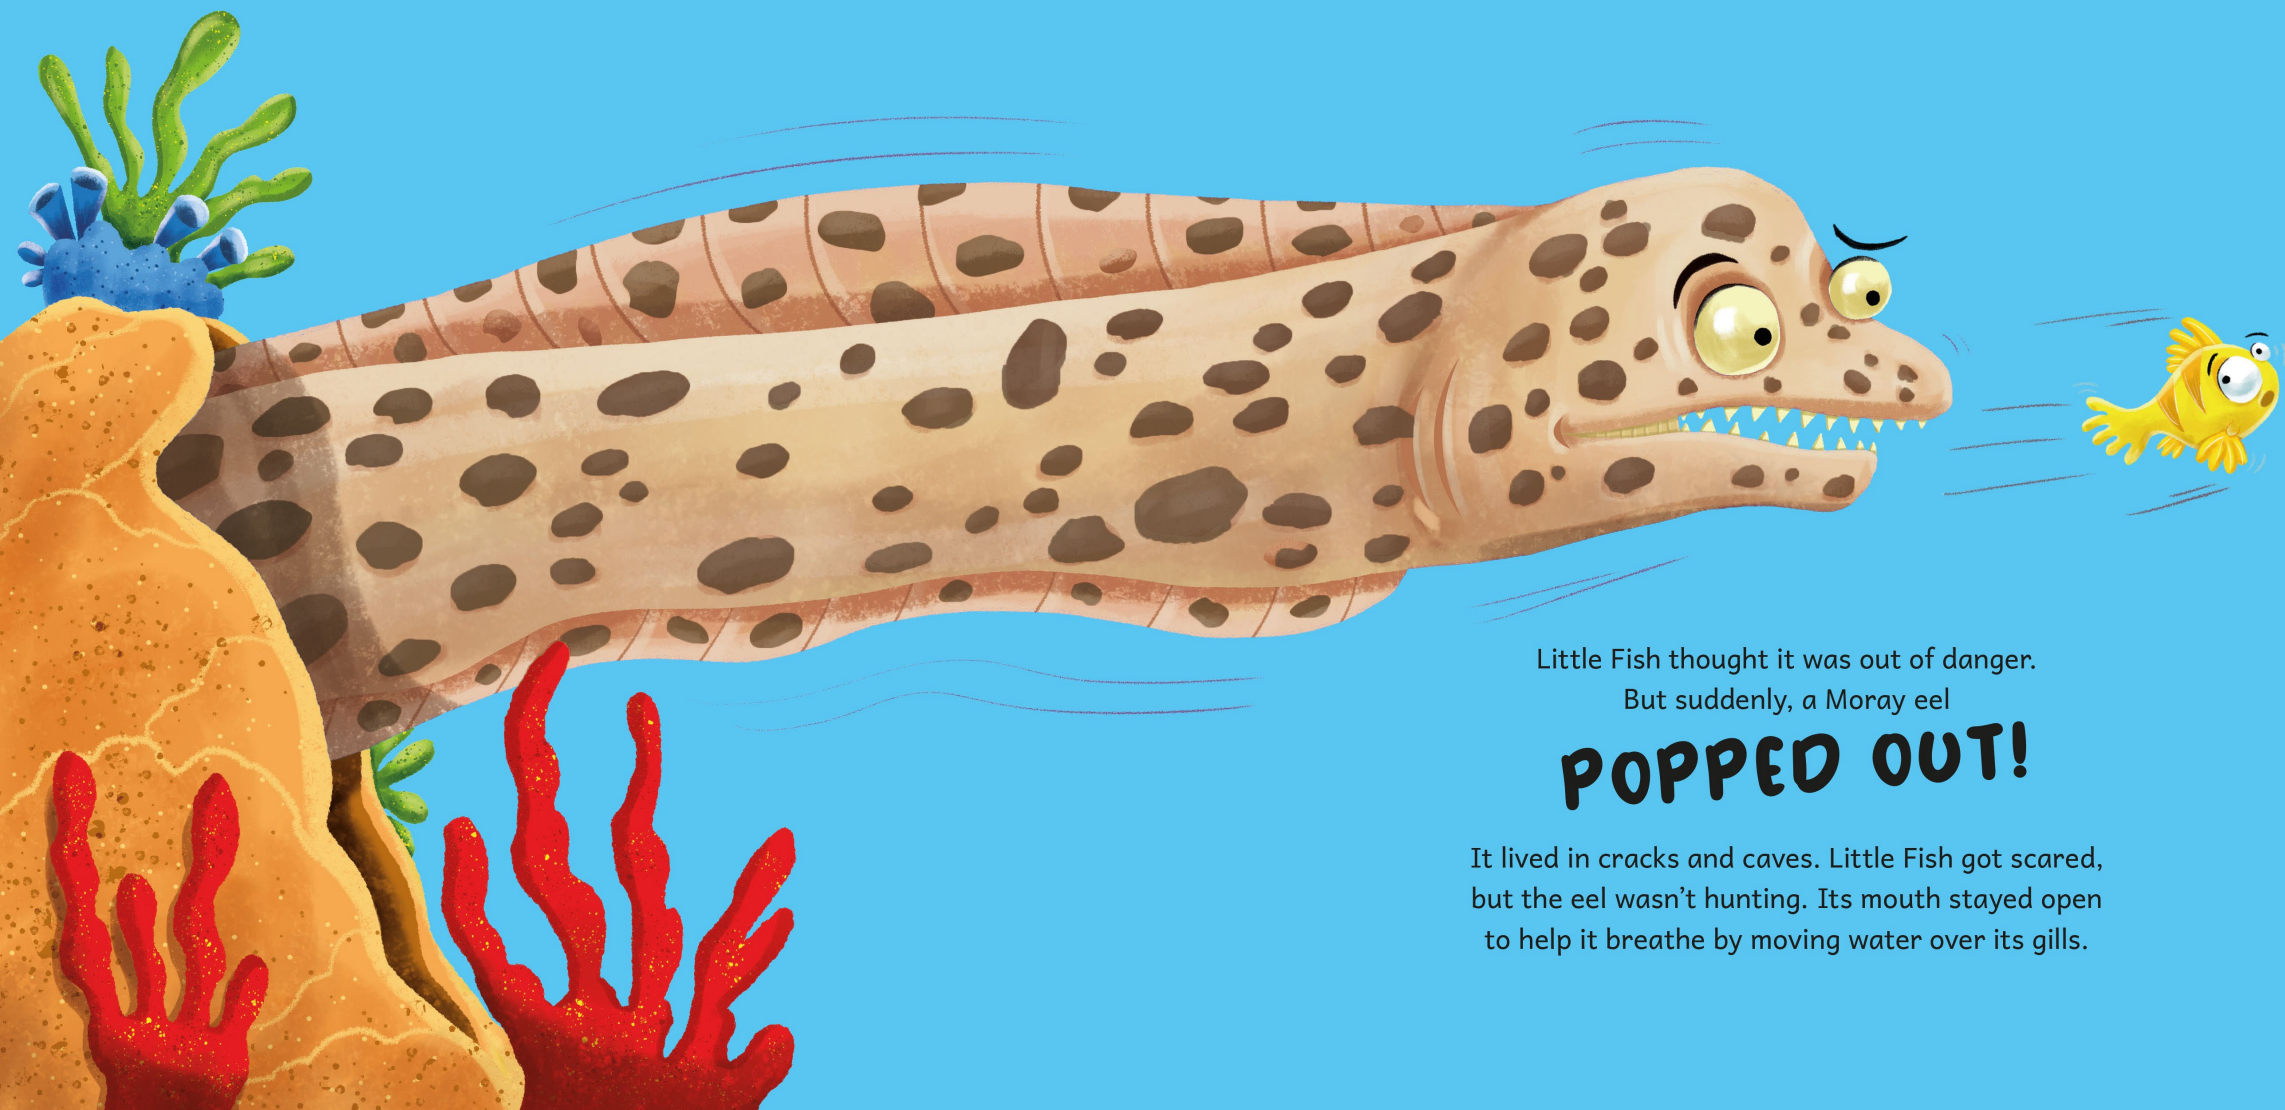

Selling points:

- Teaching the roles coral play in marine ecosystems
- Introducing unique facts about fish, reefs, and ocean habitats
- Encouraging curiosity, environmental awareness, and appreciation for marine life
- Entertaining narrative non-fiction, combining information with story

Little Fish thought it was out of danger.
But suddenly, a Moray eel

POPPED OUT!

It lived in cracks and caves. Little Fish got scared, but the eel wasn't hunting. Its mouth stayed open to help it breathe by moving water over its gills.

HELLO PLANETS

Written by Rex Luther

Cornwall-based writer Rex Luther, a Journalism & Creative Writing graduate of Falmouth University, was first inspired by one unforgettable family storyteller. Today, Luther writes children's non-fiction that brings truth to life with the same warmth and wonder.

Hello Planets takes young readers on a friendly journey through space with a small star discovering how a solar system works.

Told from the star's point of view, the story introduces the Sun, planets, and moons, showing how they move and work together. Children learn that planets travel around the star, that some are rocky while others are made of gas, and that the star provides light and warmth.

With colourful visuals and a warm, engaging voice, Hello Planet combines storytelling and accurate science to make the solar system exciting and understandable, showing children that everything in space has a place and purpose.

Selling points:

- Introducing fundamental concepts about stars, planets, and the solar system
- Teaching astronomical facts through a playful, character-led narrative
- Encouraging curiosity, wonder, and an early love of space science
- Entertaining narrative non-fiction, combining information with story
- Vibrant illustrations; perfect at home or at school

In fact, there are many one-of-a-kind parasites, and studying them can lead to amazing discoveries.

Some parasites only live in one country, like certain worms from Madagascar. If scientists find them inside animals in other countries, they know the animal has been moved from its home.

A colorful illustration of a prehistoric scene. A large, blue Triceratops with white horns and a frill stands in a grassy clearing. A young boy with curly hair, wearing a blue vest and light-colored pants, is crouching behind a large tree stump, looking up at the dinosaur with a surprised expression. The background features tall, brown trees and distant, hazy mountains under a light blue sky.

The question of whether it is possible to travel backward or forward in time is a fascinating one.

Imagine being able to go back tens of millions of years to when dinosaurs like Triceratops roamed Earth!

Just over 100 years ago, an asteroid the size of a large building exploded above a very remote area. The force of the explosion knocked down trees across an area bigger than a city!

This impact is known as the 'Tunguska event'. It was the biggest asteroid event in human history!
